

“Thank you for giving me the interview. What is your name? Where are you from?”

“My name is Olivia Ogston and I am from Australia.”

“The title of my chosen topic is Dangerous Wildlife and impact of the humans in Wyoming. What do you think about this? “

“This is a good topic, we should talk about it a lot because it is important. I come from Australia, so it is especially important to me what kind of animals I am surrounded by.”

“Have you experienced any of this on campus? “

“Yes, antelopes, turkeys or rabbits are present everywhere. These three are the most obvious.”

“If you were to continue my research, what would you pay more attention to?”

“I would also like to discuss whether smaller animals, like rabbits, can do something that harms people. For example: they dig up the garden, or something like that. I would also cover animals that are not particularly dangerous.”
